Girl basketball would suffer under boy rules, coach says

If Texas girls are required to play basketball under the same rules boys have, the girls' entire basketball program will suffer, Canyon High's Girls' Coach Bob Schneider believes.

Schneider has coached CHS girls' teams to state championships or state runner-up for the past several years. His team is undefeated so far this year.

However, a U. S. District Court this week has ruled that Tennessee law, which is similar to Texas, violates the 14th Amendment by requiring that girls play six-person to a team on a half court.

While the court said it was reluctant to interfere with the judgment of state officials and educators, it ruled that laws requiring the half-court play deny a significant educational experience to girls.

"When a state chooses to deny a significant educational experience to a class of its citizens and no rational justification for such different treatment can be found, the Constitution requires that such distinction be voided."

The suit was brought in Tennessee by the father of a girl who is playing guard, and thus has no chance to score points. Such restrictions hampered her in competing for college basketball scholarships, he contended.

Texas, Iowa, New York, Arkansas and Oklahoma have similar regulations for high school girls. College women play five-member teams on full court.

Schneider replies, "We're not in business to supply colleges with basketball players. We're in business to take care of our high school and junior high youngsters."

All his players are taught to shoot, he said, even if they are to play guard. A good player is not likely to be overlooked, he said.

"If a kid wants to play, the key is for her to work at home developing her shooting and the self-discipline it takes," he said. "There's not that big a percentage of people who get scholarships anyway."

The primary danger to girls' basketball if the five-on-five, full court rules are adopted will be a drop in fundamental skills, Schneider sees.

With a zone defense against her, a seventh grader who likely can't shoot from a long distance will end up just throwing the ball at the goal, he says.

"There are too many who don't teach good fundamentals anyway," he said.

Schneider said his program is based on teaching the fundamentals of good play to all the girls from seventh grade through high school.

If the five-on-five rule is adopted, Schneider said zone defense should be banned. Another loss will be elimination of two players, he said. With five-on-five teams, two players per game will be eliminated.

The game under present rules is faster than a five-on-five full court game would be, Schneider said.

"They can go five players and full court. They can condition themselves just like the boys but it will be a slower game," he said.

Good college players come primarily from the states that have the half-court regulation, Schneider said.

"I think it will ruin girls' basketball if we have to go five-on-five," he said.

Schneider sees pressure to change Texas rules coming from three sources: young college basketball coaches who don't know how to play the six-member team rules, college basketball coach-

Teachers dismayed by governor's pay hike plan

Leaders of local teacher groups are taking the only stance they feel they can toward Gov. Dolph Briscoe's proposal that teacher pay hikes be paid from local school district funds in the future.

"They're waiting to see the eventual outcome of what portends to be a major fight between proponents of the governor's plan and proponents of other plans when the legislature meets in Austin beginning Jan. 11."

Briscoe stunned the local leaders last week when he said his school financing package — which provides for the state to fund 90 per cent of school operations — will not include pay raises for most teachers. Those teachers, he said, must look to their local school boards for raises.

Mrs. Treasure Brasher, president of the Randall County Unit of the Texas State Teachers Association, and Mrs. Bill Webb, president of the Canyon Classroom Teachers Association, expressed dismay with the governor's announcement.

"It flabbergasted me," Mrs. Brasher admitted last week.

Mrs. Brasher contends that if the governor's plan is adopted in the legislature and teacher pay hikes are not included in the state's financing package, local taxes will have to be hiked to provide those raises.

"Every time he cuts back on state funding, it falls back to the local district," she said. "If we are to keep our schools at the same level here, then we have to cough up more and more money locally because the governor is cutting back."

Dr. Sam Thompson, superintendent of Canyon schools, said last week a tax hike is inevitable if the governor's plan is adopted. Even though the plan would call for the state to pick up 90 per cent funding for local district operations, Thompson said a tax hike would result because of the property valuation assigned to Canyon by the governor's office.

Mrs. Brasher said the local unit of TSTA has not met since the governor's pronouncement and she cannot predict what the TSTA stand will be later. She said, though, that it might be possible some local teachers will go to Austin to testify concerning the proposals for school financing during the legislative session.

At the state level, the TSTA has announced it will propose to the legislature an alternative package to the governor's proposal.

Mrs. Webb, who heads the only organization officially recognized by the school board, indicated she, too, will wait and see what proposition finally passes the legislature.

Should the governor's program pass, however, with its no-pay-hike provisions, she said she believes the CCTA will probably form a committee to study the pay situation and prepare a recommendation for the board.

She said the group will not approach the board with pay hike requests however, because "we have always felt the board had the teachers' interests at heart."

"We'll let the board ask us what we think. My first reaction is that the board will take care of us."

But Mrs. Webb admitted she is worried a bit by what taxpayers feel about teacher pay raises.

"I thought people in the community would expect us to get a raise," she said. "But since the board issue did fail a couple of times, I'm not certain how the taxpayer feels about education."

Rathjen critical of co. inaction; to lobby Wash. for lake funds

Randall County commissioners may be willing to let Buffalo Lake stagnate for lack of federal funds, but Dr. Fred Rathjen is not.

Rathjen, appointed to propose a resolution to commissioners last week but rebuffed in his efforts, said Friday he and others on a small citizens committee will urge Congressional support for the Bicentennial Land Heritage Act which commissioners characterized as pork-barrel legislation.

The West Texas State University history professor said last Monday a meeting during which commissioners turned a deaf ear to his requests for passage of a resolution supporting the land heritage act won't be the end of his involvement in the fight for funds for Buffalo Lake.

"We'll take it to a responsible level of government," Rathjen said.

Rathjen said he plans to learn the status of the land heritage act, proposed in late September by President Ford, and the names of members of congressional committees, which will discuss the act.

Then, through the media and through interested persons Rathjen plans to launch a campaign to encourage passage of the act by the congress to provide not only $1.8 million in funds for the renovation of Buffalo Lake over the next decade but also about $1.5 billion for similar projects at other national wildlife preserves and national parks.

County commissioners refused to either pass or reject a resolution proposed by Rathjen last Monday. Their solution, drawn at the commissioners' request, would have voiced commission support for the land heritage act. It was similar to an earlier resolution tabled by commissioners without action.

Rathjen was critical of the commission response to the resolution.

"Those of us who supported that resolution are profoundly disappointed in that the commissioners, in the first place, did not listen to us and treated us with extreme discourtesy," he said. "They did not have the sensitivity to pass that resolution, but lacked the courage to put it on the floor and vote it down, and then had the gall to insinuate that in proposing the legislation, President Ford was just playing politics."

"It's truly inconceivable that the commissioners behaved in this fashion relative to the Bicentennial Land Heritage Act."

"If the decisions that had to be made in 1776 had been left up to men so meager in mind and spirit, there would be no bicentennial to celebrate."

Rathjen said the commissioners' reaction to the resolution illustrated that they actually had no reason for not passing the measure.

"They never gave reasons, only lame excuses that were insults to the intelligence of a child," he said.

Rathjen said he finds some comfort in the fact that whether the commissioners had supported or not supported the resolution would make little difference on the outcome of the measure when congress reconvenes.

Commissioners, during discussions with Rathjen and others, cited as reasons for not considering the resolution their belief that the land heritage act was simply waste of government money and that the expenditure of $1.8 million on Buffalo Lake would probably not make the lake a viable recreation area.

New $5 million PRPC budget will require higher local dues

A $5 million annual budget proposed for adoption for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission next week will require only slightly higher income from the City of Canyon and Randall County, the PRPC's executive director says.

George Loudder of Canyon, who is head administrator for the PRPC in Amarillo, said dues for membership in the organization have been hiked in the budget to be presented for adoption at the PRPC annual meeting Friday in Amarillo.

The dues hike will be only slight for local governments, he said.

Randall County will be required to pay about $500 more annually under the proposed dues structure, and the City of Canyon will pay about $83 more annually.

The new dues, Loudder said, are based on a per capita levy of just over 5 cents for each government member of the PRPC. The old dues levy was 4 cents per capita.

Loudder said the PRPC board is allowed to levy dues of up to 6 cents per capita.

He said the dues hike was recommended by the PRPC finance committee in an effort to balance the budget for the coming fiscal year after a deficit budget for the last few years.

The increase in dues should bring about $7000 into PRPC coffers from throughout the commission's service area. The funding will also help offset program expansions in the area of aging and health systems, he said.

Dues produce about $29,000 in revenue under the new rate structure for the PRPC.

The dues paid by local governments into the commission are the focal point of a lawsuit filed by a West Texas State University violin teacher and a dozen other area residents who contend the PRPC is unconstitutionally operating.

The suit, filed by Dr. Donald Todd and others, was recently transferred into 181st District (See BUDGET, Page 5)

Sherman won't predict energy bill outcome

It's too early to speculate on the chances for legislative approval of two proposals which representatives of the Plains Irrigation Gas Users Association will urge Tuesday in Austin, State Sen. Max Sherman said Friday.

Sherman, this area's senator and chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, called a special hearing for Tuesday to listen to testimony from the gas users group.

Canyon's Donald Olson is expected to attend the hearing armed with a copy of a resolution passed last week by Randall County Commissioners urging the legislature to provide relief for spiralling natural gas prices for farmers.

Sherman said no bills have yet been sent his committee for consideration, but he anticipates (See BILL, Page 5)

Farmers meet Mon. on seeding

Farmers for Natural Weather and others opposed to weather modification will meet at 8 p.m. Monday in the Swisher County courthouse in Tula to map plans for fighting the latest efforts by two South Plains firms to obtain long-term permits to seed clouds in the area.

Nolon Henson, chairman of the group and a Randall County rancher, said he was to meet and talk with attorneys for the organization last week prior to Monday's meeting to discuss strategy at two adjudicative hearings which have been set for early December in Morton.

Adjudicative hearings on whether Plains Weather Improvement Association and Atmospherics, Inc. will be granted four-year permits to modify weather over parts of a dozen South Plains counties, including (See FARMERS, Page 5)

Commissioners eye law

Industry tax break studied

Randall County commissioners have been asked to spell out their commitment to industrial development in terms of dollars and cents.

They have been asked by Tax Collector Audrey Bruse to review a state law on the books since 1963 but never enforced — for lack of opportunity — in Randall County.

Commissioners are expected to give their opinions Dec. 6 during their regular meeting on whether they support a tax break for certain types of industries which might in the future locate in the county.

Mrs. Bruse has given each commissioner a copy of the law, called by some the Free Port Act, to study and comment on.

She said the county has never before had an industry or business which would fall under the purview of the law as it relates to taxation of certain business materials.

"We've never been faced with this situation," she said. "We'll set a precedent if we allow it."

Commissioners are now facing the situation, she said, because several industries eyeing Randall County sites have inquired about the law and its application through tax collection practices in the county tax office.

The law provides a tax exemption for firms which receive goods, wares and merchandise which are held within the state prior to shipment out of the state and after shipment within the state for assembly, storage, manufacturing, processing or fabricating purposes.

Purple Prose inside

Don't miss "Purple Prose," a new feature directed toward the interests and activities of Canyon junior high and high school students which begins in today's Canyon Sunday News.

"Purple Prose" Editor Jan Park, a student at CHS, has put together a group of articles on fads and interests of her contemporaries.

Miss Park will also write a column for the page entitled "One Flew Over the Parking Lot." The column and a page worth of other articles will appear every three weeks in the Canyon News.

Dolph playing games again

Gov. Dolph Briscoe is playing those word games again.

We consider it an insult to the intelligence of his constituents that Briscoe continues to cloak himself in virtue on his biennial emergence from hibernation to proclaim, innocent as the early-morning goose, that shakes its head in the amazing discovery that it's a bright world outside, that once again Texans are to be plagued with "no new taxes."

"No new taxes," when the phrase erupts from the lips of our governor inevitably, we have learned, means more local taxes.

The governor seems singularly adept at purveying his ignorance of the fact that state taxes are paid by people in the state, for the most part, and local taxes are also paid by people in the state, assuming of course that, in our case, Randall County is recognized by the South Texas governor as being a part of the state.

Almost without a single exception, Briscoe's no new taxes schemes have meant higher taxes for Randall County residents, who we contend are state taxpayers.

And, in reality, by placing the tax burden on local districts and counties, the governor's no new taxes philosophy is more hurtful of Texas residents than would be a philosophy, say, of some new taxes at the state level but no new taxes at the local levels.

Why? Because a good portion of the state's revenue comes from taxes other than the ad valorem tax, which hits the property owner the hardest while failing to extract a commensurate pound of flesh from non-property owners.

State taxes are far more flexible. Where the school district must rely solely on ad valorem taxes for local revenue, the state has more than 30 different taxes it levies to raise income. Almost without exception, everybody pays his fair share of state taxes.

Briscoe awakened last week to find himself before television lights in Austin and just couldn't wait to step in an egg he laid earlier this fall for school financing in Texas. Of course, we knew there was a catch in the governor's original proposal when local school officials discovered it would not require a tax increase for the Canyon school district. The catch — school teachers could go to their local districts for pay raises, and not expect the state to fund increases. Supt. Dr. Sam Thompson says locally-provided pay raises will mean tax increases in Canyon.

Thus, the governor's formula for electoral success — the perpetuation of a big lie almost as pernicious as any circulating in the Germany of the 1930s — strikes again.

But, get prepared, the governor has also come up with a plan for financing the money-short Texas highway system, a plan he says will not raise state taxes.

County commissioners recently wrote Briscoe to ask if his plan would mean more finances for highway-related construction or other projects might have to come from county coffers.

A Briscoe aide wrote back that he, frankly, didn't know about that at this time and, uh, well, we'd all just have to wait and see.

Wait and see, humph.

Undoubtedly, we'll have to wait, but we suspect we'll have to wait until a highway financing package is passed by the legislature to see how it impacts on county governments.

We think it far more reasonable, given the proclivity of the governor, his staff, and legislators to perpetuate the big lie of no new taxes, to demand the legislature tell local taxpayers — before passage of legislation — how local governments will be affected by the legislation.

We endorse, then, the concept of requiring legislation introduced next spring to include an attachment outlining the anticipated costs not only to state government, but to local government also.

Concurrently, we challenge Gov. Briscoe to probe the depth of his "no new taxes" promises and determine that "no new taxes" will be required at any level to finance his programs. — C.W.

Farmers need viable recourse

If there's ever an example of how farmers are treated and recognized in these days of consumer ignorance of the origin of the produce, meat and vegetables which cram their grocer's shelves it's the way legislators have handled energy regulation in Texas.

Not even as an after-thought were farmers included under the protection of the recently-created Texas Public Utilities Commission, which is to control, along with the Texas Railroad Commission, the prices and production of energy producers in the state.

Randall County Farmer Donald Olson, chairman of the local branch of the Plains Irrigation Gas Users Association, points out that in August 1965, he paid 34.9 cents per thousand cubic feet for natural gas to run his irrigation wells. Last August we paid $1.18.

The cost of natural gas for irrigation farmers has sky-rocketed just as it has for citizens of Canyon. But, the citizens of Canyon have recourse, either through their city commissioners or through the consumer protection agencies established for those purposes.

Not so the farmers. They have two choices — either pay for the gas, or don't use it.

If they pay for the gas, they must either reduce their yield potential by reducing water usage, or they must reduce the yield by halting irrigation altogether.

Either way, the consumer loses. Either way, the farmer loses.

Does it make sense, then, that rural residents and farmers should have no recourse when presented astronomical energy bills?

We think not and urge the legislature during its spring session to pass legislation putting rural areas under the Public Utilities Commission. — C.W.

Impulse toward oblivion noted

We can only note, as does Lewis H. Lapham, editor of Harper's, the American impulse toward oblivion when we review statistics produced last week to show that fewer than 10 per cent of the citizens of the Panhandle have bothered to get vaccinated against swine flu.

"The genius for self-destruction shows up in so many ways I sometimes think that the United States, despite the well-known rhetoric to the contrary, bears a grudge against the very idea of a future," Lapham writes in a recent column.

Certainly the evidence of just such a genius is abundant when, all evidence to the contrary, Panhandle residents can't seem to break out of the monotony of their lives long enough to endure a needle prick which might save their lives.

The genius is manifested, too, when 100 people declare at a public hearing they would rather drink polluted water, possibly recycling their own sewage, than spend a little money to provide clean water.

There seems something Americans find hateful about possible salvation.

Incredible, frustrating, almost unbelievable, the tendency can be dealt with with little more than a cluck of the tongue. — C.W.

Bonk, boing, bing. . .ding!

Must be something in the water.

That's all we can figure when we continue to read about a whole variety of legislative acts coming from Dallas, Irving and other metropolitan burghs in the Dallas-Fort Worth complex.

First there was this ordinance passed by Dallas commissioners which said, essentially, that magazines with covers which showed an undue amount of skin should be covered.

Now, we learn, Irving city commissioners have been debating for weeks about whether to regulate pinball machines.

Yep. You read it right. They're worried down there about places that have pinball machines, and they're preparing to pass an ordinance regulating businesses which have pinball machines.

We're happy to note, though, that there is a bit of sanity in Irving over the pinball issue.

Says Mayor Dan Matkin: "You wouldn't need the ordinance if parents regulated their kids."

We think the whole situation deserving of 1000 points and a free game. — C.W.

David wins another one

Nothing satisfies quite so much as a David and Goliath story which ends with David the victor.

So we derive no little satisfaction from the victory proclaimed Tuesday for Marguerite Strain, the City of Canyon financial director who for four years has taken on the Goliath Texas Municipal Retirement System.

Criticism of Brown reminds reader of antics of old dog

Dear Carroll:

Intelligent criticism of anyone or anything, when factually undegraded, logically presented, clothed with an attitude of concern for the good of all, and offered with due respect for the person or thing, is a commendable exercise; but ridicule, though it be arrayed in the robe of criticism, when tainted with innuendos, questionable in purpose, apparently seeking to destroy the value or reputation of another, and utterly void of proof to sustain insinuations, constitutes a practice that smacks of evil intent or the lack of intelligence.

Because one is entitled to his own personal opinion regarding all matters, may not always justify the manner in which it is expressed.

After considering a number of letters to the Editor of the Canyon News directed toward Ann Brown, I am not sure as to which one of the two above mentioned categories they rightfully belong.

I am certain of one thing. They remind me of an incident that happened years ago in the life of Old Fuzzy.

Old Fuzzy was a little dog that was born at our home when we lived at 2609 Fifth Avenue. She regarded her station in life as a member of the family; and had nothing in common with other dogs. She was permitted to occupy a place in or out of the house as suited her pleasure; and oftentimes when she was left alone, and seeing our car approaching, she would diligently look for some hapless cat that might be ambulating across a vacant area near the house, so as to demonstrate to us her watchfulness over the premises, by putting that old cat in his place, and by so doing gaining our attention and applause.

Clark Jamagin, who lived about a block east of us, kept some big Boxer dogs. Quite often one or two of them would trail down the street in front of our house. Little Fuzzy made a practice of seeing to it that each time they passed they received a good tongue lashing. The big dogs completely ignored her yapping, regarding her puny existence as totally unworthy of their notice.

As time went on Old Fuzzy grew bolder and bolder. She even dared to charge out into the street with hackles up, and with all the volume she could muster, hurl scathing, canine epithets at the big brutes at close range. On the day the incident referred to earlier, occurred, my wife, hearing the vociferous barking of Fuzzy, went to the door and pushed open the screen just in time to see the little creature charging toward one of the big Boxers at full speed.

Since the big dog was past center and trotting on down the street unmindful of the yapping, charging pooch behind him, it may be presumed that he either became curious or slightly annoyed, for he abruptly stopped and turned his side to his opposition. Though the little mutt slammed on her brakes, she had ventured a mite too close at a speed a little too high, and she literally skidded clear under the belly of the big dog without touching him. Apparently the little thing suddenly realized what might happen to her should the object of her attack become offended and decided to express his displeasure. With her little tail tucked closely in and her tummy scarcely above the ground, with record speed she made for the open door where Mrs. Cosby was standing. Like a scared rat diving through a knot hole, she darted through the open door and never looked back until she was well under a bed in the far, back room. I have often wondered since then, if the old big dog was not more amused than annoyed by the incident.

Learning a lesson of life from that canine episode, I have firmly resolved to never attempt to belittle anyone, who in the eyes of fairness, stands taller than I, lest by contrast, my smallness of stature be more vividly brought into focus.

Whence our foreign policy?

By CARROLL WILSON

The big problem with the foreign policy of the United States is that nobody knows what it is.

We simply know that everybody in Washington says we have one.

That's why I read with interest last week an article in the Amarillo paper which declared in bold headlines that under a President Carter the basic goals of our foreign policy will probably be unchanged.

Alas, I didn't find from my reading exactly what those basic goals are.

As a concerned citizen, I've spent the last few years under Henry Kissinger trying to figure out from the evidence available just exactly what our foreign policy goals are, and thus, what our foreign policy is.

In that effort, I have run across in my reading in several publications a declaration about Henry Kissinger that I felt most revealing about his assumptions in dealing with foreign nations.

After all, I have figured, if I can't know our basic goals perhaps I can know our basic assumptions and extrapolate from there what our basic goals should be.

The declaration about which I speak is simply this: that Kissinger, as Secretary of State of one of the world's most powerful nations, works in foreign policy from the basic assumption that the Western World is in decline and that his role and the role of our government should be to apply the brakes at propitious moments to slow the rate of decline.

Now that's one hell of an assumption for a secretary of state to possess, I've told myself numerous times.

Last week, after reading an interview published in the Amarillo paper in which the interviewee stated emphatically that Kissinger does, in fact, hold to that basic assumption about the West, I decided to try to find out for myself if the secretary of state is so incredibly out of touch that he holds that assumption and so incredibly naive that he would tell anybody he holds that assumption if he does hold it.

So I called Dr. Loyal Gould, chairman of the Baylor University department of journalism, because he's the interviewee who asserted in the Amarillo interview that Kissinger assumes the West is in decline.

Dr. Gould, a former foreign correspondent who returns to Europe almost annually to write and research, emphatically insisted that Kissinger has stated he believes the West is going downhill.

And furthermore, Gould said, the evidence is overwhelming in Europe and Africa that Kissinger's foreign policy assumptions have led to near-disastrous results.

But, because Gould couldn't tell me when and where Kissinger said he assumes the West is retreating, I decided to ask Henry himself.

So I called Washington only to learn the secretary of state wasn't available to talk to me.

A very nice girl on Kissinger's press relations staff was available, though, and she told me that her boss absolutely does not believe the West is dying.

That he does, she said, is a foul rumor started by one Admiral Elmo Zumwalt, retired Chief of Naval Operations, who claimed in a book written prior to his campaign for a Senate seat that Kissinger confessed his basic assumption during a trip years before.

I'd like to believe her. I confess, though, that I find the issue less than settled even after my talk with the press aide.

Because gnawing at the back of my mind are all the years of Kissinger's foreign policy ventures.

And from the evidence at hand, I'd say Kissinger may not, as his press aide says, believe the West is in decline but his actions don't testify to that disbelief.

On a disturbingly consistent basis, Kissinger has gone to the bargaining table from the stance of weakness rather than strength, with a rhetoric of feebleness not power, in obsequious gestures indicating the United States borders on senility.

Even more disturbing, though, is the prospect that Mr. Carter may continue the status quo.

It is a chilling thought, then, given the practice of Kissinger and the promise of Carter, that perhaps the assumption of Western decline is not a personal assumption but one reflective of the national spirit and will.

Our world

Do best for the elderly

By ANN BROWN

An article in last week's Canyon News touched on a national scandal that makes welfare cheating, our bloated bureaucracy, and the ever-rising crime rate — even child abuse, pale into insignificance: abuse of the aged.

An area urologist, whose practice is practically confined to the aged, reports that about the only patients he has who are not being exploited or abused — or both — by their own children are the ones who have no property and are able to maintain themselves on their social security. The parents are no burden, and there's nothing to inherit.

As was so well pointed out in last Sunday's paper, there is almost no legal protection for the aged. On the contrary, our courts foster abuse of elderly parents as they often do little children by awarding them to the natural mother regardless of her obvious unfitness for their custody.

Middle-aged adults can have their parents declared mentally incompetent, and take over their assets and custody at will. Even one child can do so — provided none of the other children raise an objection.

Many times, children do not bother to seek legal control; they simply go to the parents' banker and tell him the old people are no longer competent to handle their money. From then on, son writes the checks.

Frequently we read in the paper where confidence men have fleeced an aged widow of her life's savings. It happens somewhere every day.

In an effort to protect their elderly depositors from con artists, bankers often play right into the hands of unscrupulous, greedy children.

As much as it hurts old people to be fleeced by strangers, it grieves them far more to be robbed by their own children.

There are many contributing factors, of course, to abuse of the aged; one is their own impaired memories.

It seems that our memory mechanism works something like a tape recorder. And when we get old, it may cease to function.

The old fellow who can remember childhood exploits in minute detail may not be able to recall what he had for breakfast — or if he had any at all.

A lonely old widow may complain to the neighbors that her children never come to see her. When the neighbors see her devoted children coming and going every day, they are prone to discount every thing she says, and generalize that nothing — old people say is authentic.

It's true no law can force adults to love and cherish their aged parents any more than it can force them to love and protect their little children. Any legal protection at all, however, would be an improvement.

One might think parents who abuse their little children simply reap what they have sowed when they get old. This is not necessarily true.

Abused children often extend every courtesy (not love) to their aged parents. And adored — even favored — children are frequently the most exploitive.

People act according to what they believe. Parents who believe their little ones are gifts from God, and that He will hold them personally accountable for rearing them in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord" will probably do their best to obey that command.

And adults who believe in an omniscient, omnipotent God usually try to honor their parents.

God-honoring parents will neither abuse nor spoil their children. And adults who love God will do their best for their aged parents.

So while none of man's laws seem adequate for either of these problems, obedience to the first commandment would solve them both.

Thru the looking glass

Watching the wheat grow

By LAURIE TELFAIR

It is sometimes hard for us city folk to know when we're being made sport of.

Take this matter of wheat and cattle. When husband, children, dogs and cats arrived here a year and a half ago, I soon noticed fields, apparently plowed and planted. And, sure enough, a green fuzz soon covered the dirt.

"Look," I said. "Winter wheat." That was a guess based on the AAA guidebook notation that wheat was a big deal around here.

But next, I saw that someone had let some cows in on their wheat crop. What a shame. The farmer will probably have to plant it over.

After all, common sense will tell you that nobody plows and plants a crop and then deliberately puts cows on it to stomp around and eat. I know what one German Shepherd can do to a lawn, let alone a bunch of bovine lawnmowers on a field of tender wheat.

So I asked some of the farm experts around the office. Yep, they said. Grazing makes the wheat roots tougher. Cattle stay on it all winter and then the crop is harvested in the spring.

Back home, I reported this information.

"Boy are you gullible," my husband snorted. "No one turns cows in to eat something they are going to harvest. They are just putting you on."

Well, my experts seemed reliable enough, so I decided I'd wait and see what happened. But then came the drought and most of the wheat got plowed under so I never got to see if I had been duped.

I'm watching this year and you can depend on it.

This is not the first time I have gotten into trouble through agriculture. I once went out to take a picture of a sow and her piglets. I moved in for a close up, and, do you know, that was the first time I realized that pigs have teeth. Fortunately, I was fast.

I once sent a born and raised city dweller from Detroit and Washington, D. C. out to take a picture of a garden that had been deemed outstanding by someone or other. She arrived, posed farmer and vegetables and, hoping to show a little interest, pointed to a tall, leafy stalk.

"What's that," she asked.

He didn't know quite how to answer without implying that her intellect was probably not sufficient to allow her to be out roaming the streets alone.

"That's corn, miss," he replied. Another time she was sent out to take whatever pictures she could find for the next edition. She came back excited about this strange bush she had found growing in the middle of winter.

We eagerly developed the film and processed the negative. Sure enough, it was a strange looking bush. But I sure wish we had not started showing the photo around the office.

After all, how are two city folks supposed to know what collard greens on the hoof look like?

Don't bet on no new taxes

That Gov. Dolph Briscoe's political gambit of no-new taxes for Texans is nothing more than sheer (and, therefore, transparent) poppy-cock is best illustrated by a brief examination of the state's tax system as opposed to the tax system available to local governments.

Each time the governor has proudly told the citizens of the state he will countenance no new taxes at the state level, the pronouncement has literally meant that in all likelihood local governments will have to hike taxes instead.

In dollar and cents figures, that means Texans are still being hit with new taxes but that the governor, like Macbeth, has clean hands.

And, at least in Canyon, tax increases locally are more likely to be burdensome than would be state taxes increased for 10 million people and a thousand industries.

New taxes would be much easier to swallow for Canyon residents if they were spread over the vast area of Texas.

The governor, for example, has more than 30 avenues of taxation at his fingertips through which to raise money for the operation of state government and state-mandated programs.

Local governments have at the most two avenues for tax increases.

The governor's avenues for tax production encompass the gamut of taxation possibilities, with levies on everything from property to sales, to consumption.

To illustrate the point, let's toy with some figures for a bit.

Take a family of four with an annual income of $25,000, living in a home placed on the tax roll at $30,000, and driving one car valued on the tax roll at $6000.

The family can expect to pay $820 in local taxes to Randall County, the City of Canyon, the Canyon School District, and the South Randall County Hospital District in a year's time. That figure includes ad valorem taxes, which by far produces the bulk of local tax money for the operation of local government. It also includes the family's share of the 1 per cent sales tax which is returned to the city. It does not include user fees for water and sewer, hospital stays and the like.

On the other hand, the family of four sends about $552 to state government through clearly identifiable tax routes in a year's time.

In other words, the state tax bite is about 33 per cent less right now than the local government tax bite, and the state bite could be increased slightly for every Texan without hiking significantly that bite but with the advantage of raising considerable sums due to the great number of Texans and the great number of avenues for taxation.

State officials have at their disposal 32 routes for taxation.

There's the 4 per cent state sales tax, the 5-cent per gallon motor fuel tax, the 5-cent per gallon LPG tax, the 6-cent per gallon diesel fuel tax, the 18-cent per pack tobacco tax, the 2 per cent tax on cement at the quarry, the 4 per cent motor vehicle use tax. (See COMMENTARY, Pg. 3)

Inventor came up with pickable variety

Tomato plucking made easy

Perhaps one of Texas' most valuable exports to the State of California was a 1923 first year student at Canyon Normal (then part of West Texas State Normal College), who later became known as "Mr. Tomato."

G. C. "Jack" Hanna, a Floyd County native, is credited with saving the tomato industry in California with his development of a "square" tomato that could be harvested by machine.

The story of Hanna's work is just as novel as the idea and the tomato it produced. But in the midst of Hanna's success, he still remembers his Texas Panhandle roots, and periodically checks in with his close friends, the Mitchell Jones of Canyon.

"It started back with asparagus," Hanna reminisces. "I started working with asparagus and the history of asparagus in California."

Hanna left Texas to earn his baccalaureate degree in plant science at the University of California at Davis, where he later taught and did research for 42 years.

Back in 1929 when his studies began, Hanna "found out that our vegetable labor in California was done by imported nationalities and we were running out of nationalities to import."

The era of cheap, plentiful labor was rapidly coming to an end in California, especially in the trials of World War II, and few people began to worry. A friend of Hanna who had invented the first sugar beet harvester came to the plant expert with a novel request — develop a tomato that could be harvested by machine.

"I proceeded to tell him why it couldn't be done, and he proceeded to mop up the floor with me. He said 'You people in agriculture are supposed to be leaders. So lead.'"

Hanna probably did come to believe the idea was as crazy as it sounded. "I began thinking about it in the fall of 1942, and by 1947, I was still floundering around and hadn't gotten anywhere. I had a tomato I could drop once from three feet, but dropped a second time it would break."

Finally, Hannah decided to visit plant breeders throughout the United States to try to get an idea of what they were doing.

"After the first two or three stations I learned not to mention mechanical harvesting of tomatoes because it was such a crazy idea that they (the breeders) would just quit and not bother with anyone like that."

Luckily he found what he needed in a poorly fertilized field in New York — tomato plants that looked like "little pine trees."

"Now I can plant those close together, mow them and somehow shake the tomatoes off," he remembers thinking.

Hanna's idea for a harvester was a potato digger, which he says "got about 80 percent of the tomatoes and many clods of dirt."

Wrong in principle perhaps, but at least it spurred the engineer assigned to the project into action, who wryly observed "You're supposed to leave the clods on the ground."

Hanna's first attempt at the New York cross breed didn't produce very good results either.

"I didn't get little pine trees. I had little piles of sunburned tomatoes because a disease defoliated the crop."

But success for Hanna was just around the corner. As the labor crunch threatened the tomato industry, Hanna no longer heard people laughing at his work, but those saying "when are you going to get it done."

His first successful cross breed bore fruit — Red Top 9, which was named after the Red Top line produced in New York.

"We introduced the first prototype in 1960, and the first commercial fields went in in 1961. By 1966, we were harvesting 25 percent of California's tomato crop, and in 1967 it jumped to 75 percent. After that, we had it all."

The tomato industry was saved in California, which produces 85 percent of the United States' crops, or over seven million tons yearly.

What did the ideal tomato look like? Red Top 9 is pear shaped with straight sides.

"We found that the pear-shaped tomato handled much better than the round. We didn't know why until we took a high speed movie of it. We found that in the machine as the tomatoes are riding along there's a certain amount of vibration. The long tomatoes align themselves at right angles to the direction of movement along the belt. They come to the end of the belt, fall off and land on their sides which has a greater area of contact to absorb the fall."

The long tomato may have been good, but not good enough, because it created more work for the graders and sorters who rode with the harvester.

Long tomatoes, they discovered, require the graders to orient their hands to its angle so they could pick it up, while round tomatoes could be handled without extra effort. Long tomatoes slowed harvesting and economics dictated changes.

Hanna bred the tomato shorter, and it worked.

"Mr. Tomato" retired from UC-Davis only to continue his tomato breeding for Petoseed Company in Woodland, Ca.

The conception of the ideal machine-harvestable tomato keeps changing, including new challenges to flavor, quality and firmness as the harvesting process is speeded up.

"Then we used to talk about how firm a tomato was; today we talk about how soft it is," Hanna admits to ignoring flavor requirements when he first began his breeding project.

"In anything like this you have to assign priorities. We were really desperate for labor, and there was some talk of the canning industries moving to other countries. The question was a tomato first. I decided a poor tomato is better than no tomato," he says. "Now we are really working on the flavor and we have some very good flavored tomatoes that you would thoroughly enjoy on the table."

Judging by Hanna's track record, there's no reason to think he won't succeed again.

Churchlife in Canyon

"Standing On The Promises of God" is the topic for the morning worship today at the First Presbyterian Church of Canyon. The sermon will be based on scripture selections including Jeremiah 33:14-16; I Thessalonians 5:1-6; and Luke 21:25-36. Also included will be the Communion services for the congregation.

Calvary Baptist Church will begin their Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions this week, Nov. 28-Dec. 5, and have a church goal set of $1,100.00. Special programs are planned throughout the week.

First Christian Church of Canyon begins the Season of Advent with worship services today. Advent has been celebrated in churches since the fourth century as a preparation time leading to the celebration of the nativity.

Rev. Jim Haney, director of the Episcopal Student Center and pastor of St. George, will be preaching on the theme "The Fullness of Time."

A church wide fellowship is planned this evening at Calvary Baptist Church with all families invited to participate. Ladies of the church will be providing cookies for the fellowship refreshments.

Mission and Strategy committees of the First Presbyterian Church will be meeting on Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. with other session committees meeting at 7:30 p.m. that day.

A program on plant care is planned for the Young Women's Coffee Group of the First Christian Church. The program will be held Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at Dolle's Lawn and Garden Center followed by a tree decorating time at the Fellowship Hall.

The annual congregational meeting for First Presbyterian Church is set for next Sunday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m. immediately following the Christmas services in the sanctuary. The proposed church budget for 1977 will be presented for adoption by the University Church of Christ this past week collected $585 for continued support of Phyllis Sheppard, a missionary serving in San Paulo, Brazil.

The WMU of Calvary Baptist Church is collecting bath powder and shampoo to be sent for Girls-town USA this Christmas. Anyone may contribute to the box in the church hallway.

"Stronger Than Mushrooms" will be presented by Gay Lynn Auld Tuesday morning, Nov. 30, for all interested women at the First Baptist Church. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. with a luncheon of Mexican foods to follow.

First Baptist Church has an $8,000.00 goal this year for the Lottie Moon Christmas offering. The church will be conducting a mission trip to Palomas, Mexico during the Lottie Moon season and will be aiding with medical and dental areas along with conducting Bible Studies.

Confirmation class at the First United Methodist Church will be meeting in the conference room of the church today at the regular time. A special class session is set from 9-11 a.m. on Dec. 4 which will be the last class of the confirmation study. Those desiring to join the church will be received on Sunday, Dec. 5, during the morning worship services.

"Understanding the Lost" will be the morning worship topic for First Baptist Church today. The evening sermon is titled "The Order of Barnabas."

First United Methodist Church will be holding a caroling time for church members December 5, 12 and 19 at 9 a.m. The come-and-go caroling times will be family occasions with doughnuts, coffee and juice being served.

The kitchen sink

BY SUSAN WILSON

Shortly after D'Arcy passed the eighteen-month mark I came home one afternoon with a huge armload of stuff.

"What's all that?" asked Hubby staring at the books and bags.

"D'Arcy is ready for potty-training," I announced, "and this is my equipment."

"Equipment?" asked Hubby incredulously. "I didn't know you needed equipment? What kind of stuff have you got?"

"Books from the library on the subject, a cute little training pants, a dozen pair of training pants, children's books to keep her attention while she's waiting, and little rewards for when she performs."

"What, no spotlight? No recording of fanfare or applause?"

"Very funny," I smirked, "but it's all here in the books — just read them and you'll see."

So Hubby and I (novices that we were) read every word on the subject, set up our little training center and felt pretty smug about being ready to potty-train D'Arcy. Our basic theory was rewarding achievement. D'Arcy, on the other hand, was not ready. Not only was she not ready, she was not interested. Oh, she seemed to enjoy the games with the little potty. She would put her Dolly on it and clap. Or pour a cup of water into it and expect a reward.

She was especially fond of the reading. One day she sat on the potty while I read to her for an entire morning. She didn't perform until I had to answer the phone, then she stood up, stepped away from the potty and — you guess — ed it.

The books said most children dislike wet pants. They were right, D'Arcy would remove them on the spot. But, she wouldn't keep dry panties on either.

At 2½ when we moved back to Canyon who was elated by her new Sunday School class. "They have rules," she said, "you have to keep your shoes and your pants on."

I'm not sure exactly how D'Arcy ever got potty-trained. I've blocked most of it out. I remember having a dinner party for eight one evening and D'Arcy insisting that all our guests come in to applaud her accomplishments. I remember that the very first place we ever visited in a store, restaurant or someone's home was the restroom. Mercifully, I've forgotten the rest.

Now, after training D'Arcy and Julie, we are experienced parents, facing the training of Rebecca. I wasn't ready for my last. Rebecca, you see, is very interested in wearing panties and occasionally sitting on the toilet. She is not, however, interested in the basic reason for all this fun. A piddle seems to totally surprise her. I'm not sure Hubby and I know what to do about it. She's completely satisfied with the arrangement. My mother says no one goes to the high school prom in diapers, and I could take comfort in that, if she didn't also say "there's a first time for everything!"

History of abused child reviewed

Sue Hite Club members and guests listened with growing concern as Belinda Pillow and Larry Watson of the Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation were the guest speakers for the club's meeting November 22 in the First Presbyterian Church of Canyon.

The guest speakers reviewed the case history of seventeen-year-old Sue — an abused, neglected, emotionally disabled juvenile delinquent living in the Panhandle. She has been in six different foster homes and has been in and out of trouble many times.

Sue's idol is a nineteen year old man who boasts of having committed murder. She has only two goals in life — one to mother a baby who will love her and the other goal to see her father again who is serving a prison term for incest.

Trained in emergency, crisis-oriented case work, the speakers pointed out that for Sue there are only two sources of help — the welfare system and the probation system to help Sue and no funds available from welfare until she has spent time in the juvenile justice system.

The thrust of the program was the dire need for a new agency focusing on teenagers and Mrs. Pillow concluded the program by asking the support of the club and other groups to obtain such an agency.

The "guest day" meeting for the Sue Hite Club featured a Thanksgiving refreshment table with hostesses for the afternoon providing holiday refreshments.

Funeral today for Cornett

Funeral services for Frank Paul Cornett, 62, of the Wildorado area, will be at 2 p.m. today at the University Church of Christ with Boyd Glover, evangelist, officiating.

Burial will be at Memory Gardens Cemetery under the direction of Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors of Canyon. Pallbearers will be George Cobb, Johnny Johnson, Royce Lovelace, Eugene Schenk, Glen Metcalf and Julian Berry.

Mr. Cornett died at noon Friday at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon.

He was born Aug. 26, 1914, in Roger Mills County, and married Vineta Young in 1938 at Plainview.

During World War II, Mr. Cornett served in the merchant marine and after the war he worked as a machinist for several years with the Pacific Press in California. He returned to the Panhandle in 1951 and farmed near Canyon before moving to the Wildorado area in 1953.

He is survived by his wife; sons, Stephen B. of Wichita, Kan., and David M. of Wildorado; a daughter, Mrs. Frankie Pauline Sullivan of Albuquerque, N.M.; brothers, Glen of Oklahoma City, James of

Warm Springs, Ore., Billy of Hereford, Bobby of Colorado Springs, and Jessie of Littleton, Colo.; sisters, Mrs. Lois Fuller of Albany, Ore., Mrs. Naomi Sullivan of Lake Havasu City, Ariz., Mrs. Eunice Mangold of Amarillo; Mrs. Ruth Chateaux of Lomita, Calif., and Mrs. Edith Snell of Reydon, Okla.; three grandchildren, and two step-grandchildren.

The family has requested that memorials be in the form of contributions to the American Cancer Society. The family will be at Canyon Creek Apartments No. 57.

WT concert Wed.

The Matilda Gaume Early Music Consort will present a collegium musicum concert Wednesday, Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. in the West Texas State University Branding Iron Theatre.

Named in honor of the retired WTSU music professor who organized the group, the Matilda Gaume consort will open their concert with "Bransles Simples" by Claude Gervaise, followed by "Quanto, quanto (from Niobe)" by Agostino Steffani and "Most Sweet and Pleasing" by Thomas Campian.

Other pieces are "To Music Bent" by Campani, "Allemande" by Matilda Gaume, "I bei legami" by Claudio Monteverdi, "Amarilli onde m'asale" by Monteverdi and "Cantata No. 4 (Christ lag in Todesbanden)" by J. S. Bach.

Also to be presented are "Nowel Syng We Bothe Al and Som" "Dans cette etable," "Sweet was the Song the Virgin Sung," "Remember O Thou Man" by Thomas Ravenscroft, "Good King Wenceslas" and "Pavane and Gaillarde" by Claude Gervaise.

Conductor of the consort is Dr. Robert Krause. Soft consort members are Peggy Aikin, soprano and alto recorder; Bridget Bailey, alto recorder; Nancy Cashion, tenor recorder; Mildred Ellis, soprano and alto recorders; Michael Fogelman, bass recorder; Alice Hendley, soprano and alto recorders; Susie McDaniel, alto recorder; Terrie Sue Roberts, soprano recorder, and Donna Tuel, tenor recorder.

Loud consort members are Bryan Bond, cornetto; Janet Claypoole, cornetto; John Jacoby, tenor trombone; and Kyle Maxwell, bass trombone.

Alice Hendley, harpsichord; Cathy Montgomery, violin; Ron Montgomery, harpsichord; Nils Neubauer, viola da gamba and violoncello; and Ben Wakefield, baritone; and Christine Wright, soprano.

Handing percussion are Nan Nelson, Ben Wakefield and Christine Wright.

Admission to the concert is free.

Sherman said he anticipates a variety of legislative proposals addressing the current practice of gas companies and other utilities to pass on to consumers the actual cost of gas paid by the companies in the field.

Currently, Pioneer Natural Gas Co., which serves the Canyon area, passes through to consumers 100 percent of the cost-of-gas price paid in the field.

Sherman expects proposals which would do everything from eliminate the pass-through allowance to cut the pass-through to a smaller percentage.

Olson contended before commissioners last week that the 100 percent pass-through means gas companies have no incentive to seek the cheapest gas available, since the costs for acquisition can be passed on in their entirety.

Pioneer volunteered to have its formula for pass-through critically analyzed by a state regulatory body, the Texas Railroad Commission, last summer.

Olson showed commissioners figures which indicate he paid 34.9 cents per thousand cubic feet for gas in 1965. In August 1976, he said he paid $1.18 per thousand cubic feet.

The cost-of-gas pass-through has meant much higher fuel prices for Canyon residents in recent years, according to figures filed at city hall.

In January 1974, the cost of gas for residential customers was 23.32 cents per thousand cubic feet. In October 1976, the cost of gas was 99.54 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Sherman does have one prediction about the two proposals from the PIGUA: "They'll both be difficult issues."

Louder has proposed a $5.5 million budget for the regional planning agency for the next fiscal year.

The bulk of the funds will come through grants from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for emergency medical systems, and through a Department of Labor comprehensive manpower training and employment program.

Those two programs also call for the mass of budgeted funds. Annual meeting for the PRPC will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday at the Amarillo Villa Inn.

"Dimmitt beat us last year and I want them bad this year," caustically stated Canyon basketball player Ricky Cooper, who was bandaged up to the point where he looked like an advertisement for Johnson & Johnson, courtesy of the 1976 football season. Cooper then took a nice comfortable seat on the bench and watched his teammates build a 29-11 half-time lead then go on to a 56-42 win.

"We played an excellent first half," said Eagle Coach B. B. Kendrick. "We shot right at 40 percent, which I don't feel is good shooting, but we put the ball up so many more times than them we had an 18 point lead. But Dimmitt only had 11 points, and any time you hold a Dimmitt team to 11 first half points, you are either doing something good or they are doing something bad."

It was a combination of both. The good that Canyon did stemmed from the jumpshot of James Walling, who scored 17 first half points, mostly on long range heaves from what seemed like Creekmore. "Since Jamie came back here last year he has been shooting like that and I see no reason why he can't do it all the time. It's spectacular because it is a long shot," said Kendrick.

And the bad that Dimmitt did was hitting only four of 19 from the floor and three of seven from the foul line.

The Bobcats came back in the second half, hitting the first three shots they took and forcing the Eagles into 10 turnovers and allowing them only six outside shots to close the lead to 37-28.

"They came back the second half and we had a mental let down because we were so far ahead," explained Kendrick, adding, "and it ended up being a ball game after all."

But the Eagles, led by clutch baskets from Terry Mick, LaMoine Davis and Randy Studder, never allowed Dimmitt to have the lead.

"We turned the ball over under pressure when we shouldn't have, but high school players are going to do that," said Kendrick. "But when we really needed to score we got the basket we needed and it came from three different people. The key to a ballteam that can win is coming up with the basket when you need it and that is what we did tonight."

The Eagles also grabbed 36 rebounds, compared to Dimmitt's 26, and turned the ball over 17 times as compared to only 11 for the Bobcats.

From the free throw line Canyon was nearly flawless, hitting 16 of 18 shots. The Eagles shot 21 of 51 from the field. Walling led the Eagle scorers with 22 points.

Sides family reveals birth

Mr. and Mrs. Danny Sides of Box 86, Vega announce the November 17 birth of a son at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon.

The baby boy weighed 7 pounds, 11 ounces and measured 20 1/2 inches at birth. He has an older sister, Cayla Ann, 22 months and his father is employed at Roark's in Vega.

Grandparents are Harold Martin of Wildorado and Gerald Ray Sides of Vega.

Lubbock author Etta Lynch autographs copies of her new book, Tender Tyrant, a biography of Texas Tech legendary coach Pete Cawthon, with some help from her friend, Wanda Evans, who will have a biography of U. S. Rep. George Mahon published next spring. Both books are published here by Staked Plains Press.

Cawthon's fans resented woman

When the author of a new biography of the legendary Texas Tech coach Pete Cawthon began to write, the biggest problem with the book was sex — her sex.

"My principal problem was being a woman," said Lubbock author Etta Lynch. "Before I got through, woman had become a dirty word."

She was in Canyon this week to speak to the Noon Lions. The book is published by Staked Plains Press of Canyon.

Lynch said every man she interviewed, including former players, his sons, or people who knew Cawthon, objected to a woman writing Cawthon's biography.

And, she admits, her sex did play a major role in determining the course of the book.

"A man would not have chosen the title, Tender Tyrant," she said. "He would probably overlook or deny that tenderness was there."

"There was a sentimentality about him that totally contradicted how hard he was on his men, and he was hard," she said.

For example, from the time he first left home until her death at 84, Cawthon wrote his mother every Saturday morning and had the letter sent by special delivery so she would get it every Sunday morning.

As an adult, he continued to ride a bus to the end of the line and then walk to his father's grave, because that was the way he had always gone as a child, she said.

Lynch said when she began the book, she started with just two names of former players. After interviewing them, she said she doubted it Cawthon's life would make a book.

"All I got were these wild tales about how he disciplined his teams. I couldn't see a book. It was just this collection of wild, crazy stories."

She wrote to his sons for information, but received no answer. Finally, she telephoned his oldest son, who reluctantly agreed to furnish information.

As she went on with the research, she said, Cawthon's family and associates relaxed and helped her.

Johnsons have baby boy here

Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Johnson of 4301 S. Travis, Amarillo announce the November 21 birth of a son, Gabriel Glenn, at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon.

The baby boy weighed 7 pounds, 15 1/4 ounces and measured 19 1/2 inches at birth. His father is employed with Amarillo Gear.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. E. M. McAdams of Frisco, Texas and Mr. and Mrs. Cleon Johnson of Amherst.

Xmas party set for HD

Christmastime for the home demonstration club and council members has been scheduled for December 6 with a holiday fellowship planned at the Family Center of the First Baptist Church.

The party will begin at 1:00 p.m. with the program featuring holiday songs presented by Canyon High School choir.

Also on the program will be the installation of new council officers including Betty Crain as chairman; Joan Thompson as vice chairman; Jean Walker as secretary; and Dorothy Davis as treasurer.

A nursery is being provided at the church and reservations are advised though not required.

Party sandwiches and confections are being provided by the various clubs of the county.

Burglars hit Gibson's

City police answered the burglar alarm early Friday morning at Gibson's but nothing was discovered to be missing.

A window was found forced open with broken glass and the back door was opened from the inside.

However, nothing appeared to have been taken. A Canyon resident reported that his camper topper had been stolen Thanksgiving.

Billy Bob Townsend of 2013 First Avenue told police the enclosure for a pickup truck body was taken from his backyard. It was not mounted on the truck.

Tax. . .

County Tax Attorney Jim Blair was out of town last week and could not be reached to comment on whether the county has an option on levying the tax or not levying it.

Mrs. Bruse indicated she might favor application of the act to provide exemptions for industry in the area categorized by the law. "It seems to me if a large plant came in, the amount we would lose on their inventory would be more than offset by the taxes paid by the plant itself," she said.

And, she told commissioners recently, the whole point may be moot, anyway.

She quoted Blair as saying there is a possibility the law is unconstitutional.

Both groups have held permits in the past and the issuance of those permits by the Texas Water Development Board has been challenged each time by Henson and the other opponents.

Henson and the farmer group claims the activities of the two weather modification firms works to limit rainfall over Randall County and other counties to the east and north of the cloud-seeding efforts. Weather modification proponents contend the cloud-seeding has no effect on rainfall and decreases hail which damages crops in the largely irrigated farming areas of the South Plains.

Marriage vows exchanged at city church

Mrs. Frank Jerome Failla, Jr.
nee Kay Nester

First Presbyterian Church of Canyon was the setting for the Saturday afternoon marriage of Miss Kay Nester and Frank Jerome Failla, Jr.

Rev. Baldwin J. Stribling, pastor, officiated at the exchange of double ring marriage vows.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Nester of Canyon. She is a graduate of Canyon High School and the University of Texas where she was a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. She has formerly taught in the Atlanta, Georgia area at the School for the Deaf at Clarkston, Georgia and is presently attending DeKalb College at Clarkston, Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jerome Failla of Honolulu, Hawaii are parents of the bridegroom. He received the BA degree from the University of the South in Seawane, Tennessee and was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He holds the M.B.A. degree from Emory University and is presently the senior tax accountant with Arthur Anderson and Company in Atlanta and treasurer for the Art Festival of Atlanta.

The nuptial rites were exchanged before the altar which was centered with an arch candelabra bearing ivory tapered with accented greenery entwined. On each side of the altar were pedestals holding urns filled with arrangements of large gold mums and burgundy chrysanthemums highlighted with poms in shades of gold. Matching arch candelabra highlighted with greenery and ivory candles framed the outer altar area. The bridal path was lined with arrangements of greenery around ruby votive candles which marked the pews and were tied with gold and burgundy velvet ribbons.

Preceding the marriage rites, Mrs. Terry Milligan of Austin, played violin selections including Air On The G String by Bach, Ave Maria by Bach-Gonoud and accompanied Terry Milligan of Austin, soloist, who presented Through The Years by Yumanna.

For her wedding, the bride chose a formal gown of white silk organza enhanced with a re-embroidered lace panel defining the bodice. The wedding dress featured a natural waist, high neckline and lantern sleeves accented with wide lace cuffs. The demibell skirt was complemented with a panel of lace. The detachable wattleau train unfolded from the back yoke cascading to chapel length. Her bouffant wedding veil was fashioned in silk English illusion and cascaded in tiers from a chalet of pearl embroidered lace. The bride's bouquet was a nosegay arrangement of gold and burgundy baby roses with white snowflake chrysanthemums and baby's breath.

Mrs. John Brantley of Canyon served as the matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Brenda Schuch of Stone Mountain, Georgia and Miss Bernice Failla of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The bridal attendants wore matching formal gowns of cranberry corded jersey featuring banded necklines, and bishop sleeves with yoked bodices. The skirts were softly gathered to the natural waist with a cummerbund inset and sash. Nosegay bouquets featuring gold daisy mums and gold cushion poms accented with red baby roses and burgundy velvet buttons with tailored bows were carried by the bridal attendants.

Sam Failla of Atlanta, Georgia served as best man. Groomsmen were Charles Coburn of Lakewood, Colorado and Cameron Robert of Vestal, New York. Ushering were Charles R. Nester, Jr., of Dallas and Dr. John Brantley of Canyon.

The wedding reception was conducted at the A. W. Lair home where the table was centered with an epergne of yellow and red baby roses with white poms and baby's breath.

Pre-nuptial courtesies extended the couple included a miscellaneous bridal shower at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. Edwin Low in late October. Co-hostesses for the occasion were Mesdames J. Pat Stephens, B. J. Ormsby, Sidney Burgess, J. B.

Roberts, Wm. R. Wilson, Royal Brantley, Hatcher Brown, Felix Pierce, J. Mack White, Barry Stevens, Joe Whittington and Fred Stoker.

A luncheon for the bride was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Jones with Mrs. Sherwood Bladell, Mrs. Truitt Hull and Mrs. C. E. Wright as co-hostesses.

Other pre-nuptial courtesies for the couple were the rehearsal dinner held at the Amarillo Club with the bridegroom's parents as hosts for the evening and a brunch at Rhett Butler's with hosts including Dr. and Mrs. Irby Carruth, Mrs. J. P. White, Dr. and Mrs. Manly Bryan, Dr. and Mrs. Ples Harper, Dr. Leta Boswell and Dr. and Mrs. John Brantley.

The bride changed to a four piece rose plaid pantsuit for the wedding trip to Colorado. They will be establishing their home at 1197 The-By-Way in Atlanta, Georgia.

Mrs. George Edd Cook
nee Patricia Sue Lambert

Double ring vows are exchanged in city

Miss Patricia Sue Lambert and George Edd Cook exchanged double ring marriage vows Wednesday afternoon, November 24, at 4:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church at McLean, Texas.

Rev. George G. Cook, father of the groom, officiated at the ceremonies. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter C. Lambert of Hereford and the bridegroom's parents are Rev. and Mrs. George G. Cook of El Paso.

Family of Love was presented by Glenna Marie Cook, sister of the groom, accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Fabian. The church was decorated with one large bouquet of flowers of varied colors of blue, with twin candelabrum in the background.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal floor length wedding gown of shantung weave polyester with matching train designed with semi-natural waist. The wedding dress featured long tulle sleeves held to a cuff with a bell styled skirt extending to a full back forming the chapel train.

The mantilla styled veil featured three butterflies formed of seed pearls and rhinestones held to the veil of natural colored net.

which was made and designed by the bride's mother. As a gift from the groom she wore a pair of diamond stud pierced earrings and from the groom's parents a family heirloom necklace made of sapphires with a tear drop pearl. The bride carried a nosegay featuring two red roses, one presented to the bride's mother before the wedding vows, and one to the groom's mother afterwards.

A blue and white dress with a sweetheart neckline and short gathered sleeves with a full gathered floor length skirt was worn by the maid of honor, Tina Lambert, sister of the bride, from Hereford. She carried a white nosegay of flowers, accented with blue.

The bride's mother chose a cream-colored A-line long skirt accented with a blouse of the same background color with shades of aqua, blue, and rust accent. The groom's mother chose an aqua floor length dress to wear for the occasion.

Richard Johnson of San Antonio served as best man. Ushering were Kenny Johnson and Yale Poland, both of Canyon.

A square three tiered wedding cake decorated in tones of blue was served from the bride's table afterward in the church fellowship hall. The table was laid with lace over blue and attended by Ann Long, Jo Nell Johnson, Denise Lamb, and Barbara Creek. A red velvet sheet cake was served from the groom's table. Charlene Patton registered guests.

The couple took a wedding trip to Oklahoma City, and will be establishing their home in McLean after November 29.

The bride is a 1971 Canyon High School graduate and 1975 West Texas State University graduate with a Bachelor's degree in nursing. She is presently employed as a registered nurse at the McLean Hospital.

Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Burrus, Canyon, and Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Lambert of Roby, Texas.

The groom is a 1969 graduate of Address High School in El Paso and 1973 West Texas State University graduate. He received a degree in business agriculture and was a member of the Agricultural Honor Society and Alpha Chi. He is presently employed by Heaton Cattle Co., of Pampa as office manager. He is the grandson of Mrs. Anell Birdwell of Seattle, Washington, and the late Edd Birdwell of Henderson, Texas. He is also the grandson of the late Rev. and Mrs. George N. Cook of Brenham and Navasota, Texas.

Baskets of apricot gladioli, accented with baby's breath and greenery, marked the altar of St. Ann's Catholic Church Saturday evening for the double ring ceremony which united Miss Yvonne Denise Dooley and Stanley Louis Wieck.

Rev. Jack Gist officiated at the ceremonies. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Claire Dooley of Canyon and C. M. Dooley of Harlingen, Texas. She is a graduate of Canyon High School and earned her degree at West Texas State University in 1976 where she was selected to Who's Who Among American College and University Students.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Wieck of Urmberger are parents of the bridegroom. He also graduated from Canyon High School and attended West Texas State University and Adams State College at Alamosa, Colorado. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and is presently engaged in farming near Stratford where the couple will be living.

Pre-nuptial musical selections included Annie's Song, Color My World, The Wedding Song, Father We Ask Your Blessing and The Lord's Prayer.

For her wedding, the bride chose a formal wedding gown of white organza over bridal taffeta designed with a Victorian neckline which was enhanced with a ruffle of cluny lace and featured miniature self covered buttons accenting the hands. The softly gathered A-line skirt was complemented with a lace trimmed flounce and swept to back fullness forming a full chapel train.

The bride wore a matching lace veil, enhanced with a soft satin bow and seed pearls, which held the lace edged wedding veil of sheer illusion. The bride carried a handkerchief given by her mother as "something old" and had pearl earrings from her mother as "something new." She had a sixpence from Mrs. Leon Gheer as "something borrowed" and wore a handmade lace garter, made by her sister, Ann Dooley, as "something blue."

Ann Dooley, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Other bridal attendants included the bride's sisters, Carole Dooley and Mrs. Terry Jupe, and Karen Artho. The bridal attendants wore dresses of apricot crepe with sheer voile overlays accenting the bodice with apricot flowers. Each carried a single stemmed apricot colored carnation.

Virgil Artho of Dalhart served as best man. Groomsmen were Dale Artho of Vega, Arnie Wieck of Dawn and Mike Wieck of Urmberger, a brother of the bridegroom. Ushering were the bridegroom's brother, Chris Wieck of Urmberger, and Lawrence Bromman of Hereford.

The newlyweds took a honeymoon ski trip to Colorado following the wedding reception supper and dance which followed in St. Ann's Parish Hall.

nee Janet Marie Wilhelm

Ceremonies unite couple at Dalhart

St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Dalhart was the setting for the double ring marriage of Miss Janet Marie Wilhelm and Joseph Louis Reinart on November 26.

The afternoon ceremony was read by Father Kevin Hand. Flowers marked the altar and an aisle cloth marked the center aisle. Flowers were also used for pew markers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wilhelm of Texline. She is a 1976 graduate of Canyon High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reinart of Dumas are parents of the bridegroom. He is a 1973 graduate of Dumas High School and is presently farming with Reinart Farms, Inc. in the Dalhart-Stratford area where the couple will be establishing their home.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride selected a white crepe dress with a formal length wedding train. The dress featured a high neckline with beaded lace accenting the collar, waist, and cuffs of the long sleeves. The elongated waist featured an empire styling in front with a drop in the back. Her wedding veil was a Queen Elizabeth style with chapel length veiling held to the headpiece featuring beaded lace to match the wedding dress. Both the dress and wedding veil were fashioned and made by the bride's grandmother.

Judy Wilhelm of Texline, sister of the bride, served as the maid of honor and other bridal attendants were Linda Hartman and Trina Hunter, both of Canyon, and Mrs. Billy Earl of Nazareth.

Leander Reinart, Jr. of Hereford was best man. Groomsmen were Randy Wieck of Urmberger, Bryan Reinart of Dalhart and Dan Wilhelm of Urmberger, brother of the bride.

Ushering were Rick Reinart of Dalhart and Wade Wilhelm of Channing, a brother of the bride.

A wedding meal was held at the home of the bride's parents following the marriage service. The catered meal was complemented with the bride's wedding cake and the groom's cake along with pumpkin breads made by the bride.

The bride changed to a rose colored blouse with a striped sweater and dark brown pants for the wedding trip. The couple will be establishing their home in the Dalhart-Stratford area after December 3.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Irlbeck

Anniversary event today

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Irlbeck of Rt. 1, Canyon are being honored today on the occasion of their Golden Wedding Anniversary with a reception at St. Mary's Parish Hall in Urmberger.

The former Marie Skypala and Ted Irlbeck were married November 23, 1926 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Urmberger. They are engaged in farming operations west of Urmberger.

Both are active members of St. Mary's Catholic Church where she belongs to the Altar Society and he is active in the Knights of Columbus.

Hosting the anniversary reception will be the couple's two daughters, Evelyn Leven of Panhandle and Alice Koch of Urmberger. The Irlbecks have 9 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Mrs. Stanley Louis Wieck
nee Yvonne Denise Dooley

Wedding gifts are presented

Wedding gifts were bestowed on the pending marriage of Miss Mary Ann Heiman and her fiancé, Joseph Edward Gillis, at a miscellaneous shower held Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. John T. Reeves, 910 25th Street.

Receiving guests with the honoree and hostess were Monica Heiman, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Joan Gillis of Mesalero Park, mother of the prospective bridegroom.

The reception table was laid with a green cloth and accented with red ribbon. A red and white bouquet of carnations and mums centered the serving table.

Cinnamon apples, sweet rolls, spiced punch, hot tea and coffee were served with Karma Denton and Anne Reeves presiding at the table. Guests were registered in the bride's book by Tracy Gillis, sister of the prospective bridegroom.

Assisting Mrs. Reeves with hostess duties were Mesdames J. D. Barker, Franklin W. Daugherty, Jeanne Denton, Mary Gill, Hollice Snyder, Loly Tarrab, Garrett Welch, Wm. R. Wilson and Charles E. Wright.

Miss Heiman and her fiancé are planning marriage ceremonies to be read Dec. 18 at Joseph A. Hill Memorial Chapel on the campus of West Texas State University.

Choice of wheels clue to personality

It seems that everyone is driving — to school, to work, and up and down the drag on weekends. But the cars and pickups that fill up the high school parking lot are more to their owners than just a means of transportation. They can put their drivers in a place of respectability or simply call attention to the operator. The fastest, the newest, and sometimes, even the oldest are "the" cars to own.

Possibly the two most popular types of new cars on the high school campus are the Chevrolet Camaro and, in the same class (consisting of even the same basic body) the Pontiac Firebird. Maybe the next most popular type of new car is the class which includes the Chevrolet Monte Carlo and the Pontiac Grand Prix. Those students lucky enough to be able to afford new cars with the high prices associated with luxury have been choosing these cars in the past few years.

New pickups are also popular, and some of the best-selling brands are the Silverado, a luxury type pickup made by Chevrolet, and the Dodge Adventurer, usually trick painted in bright colors. These pickups, however, are not inexpensive, either, since most of them are selling, fully equipped at about $14,000, the budget of most students would certainly be stretched by buying one of them.

Of those students who invest in used cars or pickups, many plan to "fix-up" their purchases. This process is gradual, and some owners never really get a finished product before the car falls apart from the not-so-smooth driving habits of the average 17-year old operator. If, although, the car survives and finds itself completely renovated it has been through, at a very bare minimum, three coats of primer and paint, months of body work, and weeks of sewing (or paying someone else to sew) new seat covers and upholstery. Mufflers have been added, or to the dismay of parents, removed and replaced by headers to make everyone know for three miles around fully aware that "you have arrived." Examples of these cars are seen on the campus every day: '65 Comets with "Ford" glow-in-the-dark stickers on the rear windows, white '57 Chevrolet pickups that look brand new and are extremely loud, and '57 red Chevy two door hardtops with fantastic interiors — it would be so nice if the engine hadn't been blown out (did you say at 55 mph)?

It seems that driving hot cars is almost exclusively associated with the male section of the campus population. Many of the guys would rather have a pretty female sitting in the front seat to add interest to an already nice car than to spend $550 for a trick painting job. (Although dates are expensive). Nevertheless, a few females are fixing up their cars and learning the difference between the distributor cap and a piston. Some girls have even decided a new pickup is just what they need for graduation in the Spring.

The tastes of Canyon students in the cars and pickups that they drive are certainly very different. Pickups or cars, old or new, fast, or maybe even not-so-fast; a teenager's auto is a statement of his or her individuality.

The car craze never quits. CHS student Judy Acker poses on a '57 Chevrolet owned by Steve Ray.

"One Flew Over The Parking Lot"

By JAN PARK

Of all the tests and finals a student must face during the twelve years of his school career, I suppose that the most difficult is the driving test. Not the written test; that can be prepared for by studying the little book given to student drivers by the Department of Public Safety. I'm talking about the actual driving portion of the exam.

"All you have to do is drive around the block," my friends told me. Okay, I reasoned. Easy enough. So for four days, I drove around the block a total of 6,589 times, practicing. I studied every angle of each corner, observing where cars were usually parked; where telephone poles were always parked. When I thought everything was going just great, I decided to try the test. I mean, after all, if I flunked, I could always take the test in... oh, say... three months?

After filling out twelve different types of forms in triplicate, having my thumbprints taken three times, and swearing that I really was the person that my birth certificate certified, I was given a score card (like the ones for miniature golf, you know?), and instructions to put the card under the wiper blade and wait in the car. And wait I did, for at least thirty minutes (although it seemed like three hours).

Then I saw him: the man who held my future in his hands. (Possibly he felt the same way about me). He was at least seven feet tall, and had dark red hair. When he smiled, I thought of Simon Lagree.

He then asked me to turn on the lights. I pulled out the little knob, but obviously, it was the wrong one, because windshield cleaning fluid began to spurt all over the front window. Very much shaken, I found the light switch and flipped it into the "on" position. I then decided to roll down the window so as to hear his directions. (Well, better late than never!)

He got into the car, and without turning his head to look at me, told me to get out of the parking lot, turn left, turn right, turn left again, parallel park, back up 66 feet, and return to the parking lot. By the first "turn left," I was lost. I was too busy wondering how he expected me to remember what he had said to pay just a whole lot of attention to where I was going.

But, finally I made it to the pylons for parallel parking, and accomplished that part of the test perfectly (except for the one pylon that I knocked over, and the small, insignificant fact that I was four feet from the curb). Pretty good for a first try, don't you think?

By this time, the officer looked a little ill, so I hurried back to the parking lot of the DPS to let him out. As he stumbled from the car, he handed me the score card, which was marked with a 75%. I still haven't figured out why — possibly the poor man was afraid he would have to give me the test again in January.

Suzie Wright is ready for a spin in one example of a popular vehicle on the CHS campus.

The pickup truck belongs to Dan Whipple.

Take a tip from shoes

Have you ever thought about choosing a trademark? Something that individually means "you" to others? Most of us have, at one time or another, considered a name, an object, or possibly even a type of food as a trademark that reminds others of us, and, although you've probably never considered your shoes a part of your personality, they can say quite a bit about you.

For example, simply the wear can tell people what you enjoy. The student who wears western boots is easily classified as a rodeo rider, a country and western dancer, and most generally, drives a pickup truck. The girl who wears tiny heels and scanty straps enjoys caring for her appearance and likes to follow fashion trends. Comfortable or impractical, there are as many different types of shoes as there are people.

And, on the high school and junior high campuses, the types of shoes that students wear are certainly individual, some even being the first thing his or her friends associate with a specific student's name.

For the male section, leather and suede track and tennis shoes are becoming trademarks for some students. Brand-new tennis shoes may be very nice looking, but to be known for one's shoes, they must be well worn and have character.

Boots are a different matter. New boots are admired jealously and openly. Wing tips, work boots, even dress boots of the western variety are decorating the halls this year. And surprisingly enough, not only on guys!

For females, tiny strapped sandals seem to be the dress shoe this year, even for winter. With worn heels, scuffed straps and too many times, these shoes are for everyday. For possibly a more practical trademark for winter, the girl's dress boot has been revived, and is being worn with skirts and pants on cold days to keep the snow out.

Not everyone's trademark is his shoes, but the next time you are sitting in class, just looking for something to do, check on your shoes. What are they saying about you?

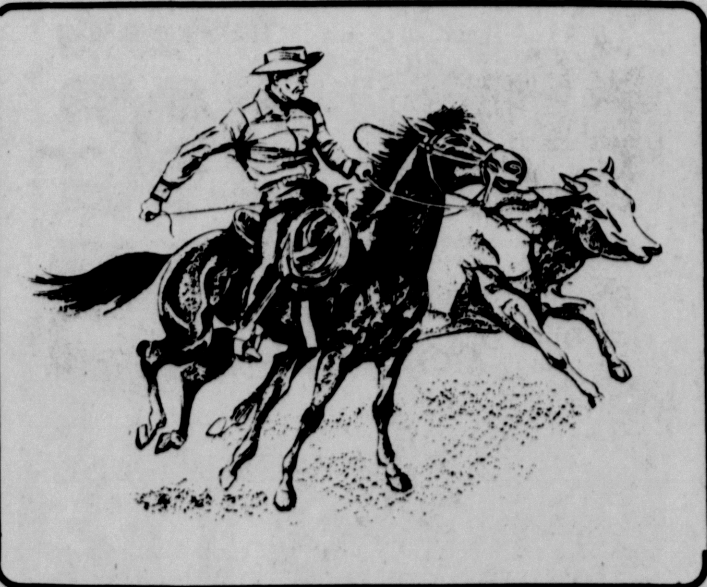

The outdoors look... one example of footwear.

A dressier style with elevated heels.

There's a shoe, casual and comfortable, under there somewhere.

Rodeo is number one

If anyone asked you what the number one and fastest growing sport in America was, would you be able to answer correctly? Well, if you thought that the sport was rodeo, you would, and Canyon youth participates wholeheartedly in area rodeos.

If you've never been to a rodeo, you've certainly been missing something. There are moments of tension, toughness, and an all-around sense of togetherness that seems to surround rodeo people. Events range from possibly the most dangerous sport of bull riding down to barrel racing, an event that is usually confined to girls and women.

Students participate in many types of rodeo events — for example: team roping, barrel racing, bull riding, bull-dogging, goat tying, ribbon chasing, and bronco busting.

CHS students do not have their own rodeo club — at least not one that is school sponsored. Many students have been trying to change this, but have been informed that there is either a lack of sponsors or a lack of funds. Those students interested in rodeo competition with other area clubs have recently joined their talents with other clubs: Tascosa, Caprock, and AHS in Amarillo, and Dumas, Borger and other surrounding schools. CHS students interested in rodeo clubs can contact the high school Department of Agriculture for more information.

Friends to hold officer election

Annual meeting for the Canyon Friends of the Library has been set for December 2 at 3:30 p.m. in the Canyon Community Center and will be open to the public.

The annual meeting will serve as election of officers and for naming new board of directors members. Refreshments will be served following the meeting. A review of works by Saul Bellow, most recent Nobel prize winner for literature, will be given by Dr. Sue Parks.

Going somewhere? Or been? The Canyon News wants to know about it — and so do its readers.

Fires lurk behind holiday carelessness

'Tis the season — and with holiday traditions revolving around the sparkling beauty of a Christmas tree in every household — it is a time for all residents to remember that fires await those who are unwary of the rules and guidelines to observe in caring for a holiday tree and its tinsel.

Fire Marshal Jerry Lehnick noted that "whether you purchase your living tree the first of December or wait until Christmas Eve — it has been cut and drying out for the same length of time."

In selecting a tree residents should remember that trees from the mountainside should be cut at an angle one or two inches above the original cut and then placed in water to keep it fresh throughout the season. The new angled cut will allow the tree to absorb water — but remember that the heat from rooms will tend to dry out the trees rapidly — and a dry tree is a fire hazard (kindling in your living room, you might say!).

The use of flame retardant

Mission set by church

A medical, dental and Bible Study mission trip is planned for December by the First Baptist Church of Canyon.

The mission trip will be to Palomas, Mexico and is expected to include a number of members of the local church.

flocking materials is "one of the best ways to make a Christmas tree safer," stated the fire marshal. "And when you light the tree the use of miniature bulbs is the best way — because the miniature bulbs don't generate as much heat."

"Of course, one of the most important points to remember is to check all electrical wiring and connections and DO NOT OVERLOAD the circuits and extensions being used," cautioned Lehnick.

On artificial trees use only the miniature lighting as larger bulbs will melt the branches — and on the artificial aluminum trees use either a floodlight from above or below and never use electrical wiring on these trees, because a short circuit can make the entire tree the touch of electricity.

Candles on the tree or amid dry leaves in centerpieces are OUT as they are a definite fire hazard. Candles should only be used in non-flammable holders and should be kept away from other decorations and wrappings. Always place candles where they cannot be knocked down or blown over by a breeze.

A few points to remember in selecting the tree include: (1) check for color and scent as a fresh tree is deep green with a strong scent of pine, (2) be sure that needles do not readily fall from the tree, and (3) the trunk butt of a fresh tree should still be sticky with sap.

When taking the tree into your home remember to place the tree in a location away from fireplaces, radiators and other heat sources and be sure that it is out of the traffic pattern and not blocking exit doorways.

Check lights before placing on the tree being careful to discard any equipment that you deem unsafe and always turn off the lighting on a tree and other decorations when retiring or leaving the home.

And when Christmas morning comes take precautions in disposing of the wrappings. Wrappings should be deposited in a metal container and never burned in the fireplace as they may ignite suddenly causing a flash fire in the home.

Spend your Christmas safe and happy by taking a few simple precautions as the decorations come out to signal the season is ahead!

Paintings, macrame and a number of other holiday gift items will be available at this week's Canyon Senior Citizens Bazaar on Wednesday, Dec. 1. The sale will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the center. Displaying gifts are Kitty Metcalf, left, and Eutha Hamblen.

Needy residents benefit from CCFSO holiday fund

Canyon's Community Family Services Organization is a year-round helper to aid those in need within the community and at holiday times many calls for help are received — although funds for that help oftentimes grow slim in the bank accounts of the CCFSO.

Aid to Canyon's needy throughout the year is a direct result of local citizen participation and contributions to the CCFSO.

Accounts are open at both the First National Bank and West Texas State Bank to receive CCFSO contributions, which in turn are used throughout the year to benefit the needy.

The CCFSO chairman, Ron Kershen, and Carmen Hernandez, projects chairman, are also providing for needy families by aiding clubs and organizations desiring to provide holiday baskets for those less fortunate. For information and referrals of families in need during the holidays contact Mrs. Hernandez at 655-3394.

Holiday donations to the CCFSO will be listed in the Christmas issue of The Canyon News, along with the contributors who have furnished holiday baskets for families in need. Donors wishing anonymity may make their holiday donations and deposits in that manner to the Canyon Family Service accounts at either West Texas State Bank or First National Bank of Canyon.

Homemade treats always welcomed

Peanut Toffee Bars
 $\frac{3}{4}$  cup (1- $\frac{1}{2}$  sticks) butter
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup peanut butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup firmly packed brown sugar
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. salt
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup coarsely chopped salted peanuts
1 pkg. (6 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate pieces.

Cream butter, peanut butter and sugars together until fluffy. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Combine flour, oats, salt and peanuts; stir into creamed mixture. Spread in buttered 9-inch square baking pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree F. oven 30 minutes. Top with chocolate pieces; return to oven for 1 minute to soften chocolate. Remove from oven: Spread chocolate to frost. Cool. Refrigerate to set chocolate. 36 bars.

***
Buttery Peanut Brittle
2 cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup water
1 cup (2 sticks) butter
2 cups coarsely chopped salted peanuts
1 tsp. soda

For best results, use candy thermometer. Heat and stir sugar, syrup and water in heavy 3-quart saucepan until sugar dissolves. Continue to cook and stir until syrup boils; blend in butter. Cook, stirring occasionally to 230 degrees F. Stir often after temperature reaches 230 degrees F. Continue to cook, stirring often to 280 degrees F.; add peanuts. Stir constantly to hard crack stage (305 degrees F.). Remove from heat. Quickly stir in soda, mixing well. Pour onto 2 buttered cookie sheets. (Do not scrape pan). Stretch thin by spreading and pushing to edges of cookie sheets with buttered spatula or wooden spoon. As soon as candy is set, remove from cookie sheets and break up. Store in tightly covered container in cool place. Yield: 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  pounds.

***
Peanut Butter Fudge
3 cups sugar
 $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. salt
3 squares (3 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup milk
2 Tbsp. light corn syrup
1 tsp. vanilla
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup peanut butter
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup ( $\frac{1}{2}$  stick) butter
 $\frac{2}{3}$  cup coarsely chopped

salted peanuts
For best results, use candy thermometer. Combine sugar, salt, chocolate, milk and syrup in heavy 3-quart saucepan. Boil over medium heat, stirring until sugar dissolves. If sugar crystals form on sides of pan, wipe them off. Cook, stirring frequently, to soft ball stage (234 degrees F.). Remove from heat; do not stir. Cool to warm (130 degrees F.). Beat in vanilla, peanut butter and butter. Add peanuts and pour at once into buttered 8-inch square baking pan. Cool until set. Yield: 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  pounds or 48 pieces.

NOTE: For a creamy texture, do not cool fudge below 130 degrees F. Candy thermometer should be left in pan after cooking so that fudge will cool undisturbed.

***

Pineapple Cream Salad
1 cup hot water
1 pkg. lemon flavored gelatin
1 cup marshmallows
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup salad dressing
1 pkg. (3 oz.) cream cheese
1 can (15 oz.) pineapple tidbits, drained
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup nuts

Pour hot water in blender jar and add lemon gelatin, while still hot add the marshmallows, salad dressing and cream cheese. Blend together. Let begin to congeal and add pineapple tidbits and nuts. Return to refrigerator until molded.

***
Pink Fruit Salad
1 can (21 oz.) cherry pie filling
1 can (14 oz.) sweetened condensed milk
1 carton (8 oz.) sour cream
1 carton (5 oz.) refrigerated whipped topping
1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple, drained
3 cups small marshmallows
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup coconut

Mix all ingredients together and chill. Will keep in covered container in refrigerator for several days.

***
Holiday Salad
1 large carton cottage cheese
1 large pkg. flavored gelatin, orange
1 large carton whipping cream
1 can crushed pineapple
chopped nuts, optional
Blend cottage cheese, gelatin, whipped cream and pineapple with juice. Fold in nuts if desired. Congeal in refrigerator.

Churches plan holiday events

The spirit of Christmas is prevalent during December at churches across the city with several planning special holiday musicals along with the usual class parties and fellowships.

Already scheduled for the holiday season are a holiday presentation of the "Messiah" at First United Methodist Church on December 12 under the direction of David Cameron.

The special holiday musical

"His Love... Reaching" will be presented by the sanctuary choir of the First Baptist Church on December 12 with Dr. Hugh Sanders in charge.

Other special activities for the season will include the Christmas services on December 5 at the First Presbyterian Church and First United Methodist Church of Canyon, while the First Christian Church will have the hanging of the greens as a part of their worship on December 5.

Christmas cantata at the First Christian Church will feature the choir on December 19 with the children's department providing the sermon "Christmas on the Plains."

Caroling parties are planned at a majority of churches during the holiday season by various groups. Family caroling sessions are planned for December 5, 12 and 19 at 9 a.m. in fellowship hall of the Methodist Church. Donuts, coffee and juice will be served following the family caroling sessions.

Many churches across the city will be heralding the birth of Christ with candlelight communion services on Christmas Eve.

Volunteers seek heart monitor

Palo Duro Hospital Auxiliary volunteers are offering an original Carl Smith painting in a drawing to be held during mid-December.

Tickets for the drawing are a $1 donation to be used toward the auxiliary's current project of purchasing a heart monitor for the hospital.

Auxiliary members will be selling tickets at both First National Bank and West Texas State Bank this week. Tickets are also available from auxiliary members at the Gift Shop of the Palo Duro Hospital and from all auxiliary members.

Crafty bazaar set Wednesday

A holiday bazaar featuring handmade gift items will be held Wednesday by the Canyon Senior Citizens Association.

The bazaar will be held between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Dec. 1 at the Senior Citizens Building, 1719 5th Avenue.

Handmade gift items, baked goods, paintings, arts and crafts and white elephant items will be available.

All merchandise has been donated by members of the Senior Citizens and funds received from the sale will be used for future projects of the association.

The holiday gift sale is open to all residents of the community.

It's "heart week" as proclaimed by Mayor Manly Bryan to benefit the heart monitor project underway being sponsored by the Palo Duro Hospital Auxiliary. Pictured at the signing were Bryannetta Collins, who secured the original Carl Smith painting for the project, and Janelle Dillehay, auxiliary president.

Christmas hams for give-away

Christmas hams will be given away by the Canyon Evening Lions Club following a drawing to be held Dec. 20.

Tickets for the hams are a $1 donation and may be obtained from any member of the club.

Six 10-12 pound hams will be awarded, thus, each ticket has six chances of being a winner.

Don Blankenship is president of the club which meets Monday evenings at 7 p.m. in the Village Inn.

Capture the holiday spirit now, and all year long...

Christmas cards a recent custom

Would you believe that about four billion Christmas cards are sent every Christmas? No wonder the post office hires extra help each year! It does sound like an insurmountable job! But what a lovely way to wish friends and family well and to renew old friendships. But do you know that exchanging Christmas cards is a comparatively recent custom?

Although there are several claims as to who originated the sending of Christmas cards, there is evidence this lovely custom began in England in the early 1800s. It is generally acknowledged that Louis Prang, a native German who settled in Boston, introduced them in America in about 1875.

His early cards, produced by a process of color lithography, were models of expert craftsmanship. They featured flower designs such as daisies and roses, and were quite unlike Christmas cards of today. By 1881, Prang was turning out about 5 million cards a year, and as time went by he offered more typical Christmas scenes, including the visit of Santa Claus, Madonna and Child, and blazing fires.

In 1880 or 1881 Prang sponsored an open competition for Christmas card designs, offering prizes that came to about $3000. More than 600 entries were received and were exhibited in galleries. Noted personalities of that time acted as judges.

The superior quality and workmanship of the Prang cards added to their popularity. However, with an increasing demand for cards, inferior, inartistic, cheaper cards came flooding in from Europe, and Prang found it hard to compete. He stopped producing his beautiful cards, but they are still highly valued and sought after by collectors.

Now we have cards available to fit our every mood, and one would be hard pressed to imagine the number of artists and verse writers who make up the creative forces of this vast industry. Sending and receiving Christmas cards is one of the delights of the holiday.

There is no doubt that this heartwarming custom will continue and so we say "thanks" to Mr. Prang, wherever he may be, for adding great spirit to Christmas in America!

New Mexico Xmas celebrated for days

New Mexico, Land of Enchantment, is so called because of the beauty of the land and the history of its people. The Spanish conquerors who came to the area from Mexico, in 1540, to search for legendary gold, found only six small villages where Indians lived. The conquerors named the Indians Pueblo, a Spanish word for village.

In New Mexico, at the Santa Domingo Indian pueblo, the Christmas season is honored with a four-day long, sacred ritual dance.

At 2 a.m. Christmas day it starts. After midnight mass, the Indians gather inside the church, wearing colorful costumes decorated with everything from evergreen branches to fox tails.

The dancers carry on their ceremonials until dawn, when they move to their sacred plaza, where they continue dancing through the day.

Dear Santa,
Please come to the Tweedledee to select Christmas dresses by designer. They have sizes infants to full on girls and infants to size 14 on boys.

Love,
Emily Baker

Goodies are great for gifts

Goodies you have made yourself make delightful Christmas gifts.

If you start now, you can assemble a good supply and store them in the freezer or on a pantry shelf until it is time to give. Wrap with gay holiday ribbons and present with pride.

This Holiday Ring Coffeecake is packed with butter and your favorite candied fruits, and is topped with a confectioners' sugar icing and a festive garnish of candied cherries. You can make now and freeze, putting on the icing and the cherries the day before you deliver the package.

Holiday Ring Coffeecake

2 pkgs. active dry yeast
1/2 cup warm water
3/4 cup milk, scalded
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 tsp. salt
2 eggs, beaten
4 cups flour
1 cup chopped candied fruit
Sprinkle yeast over warm water. In a bowl combine milk, butter, sugar and salt; cool to lukewarm. Stir in eggs and yeast. Beat in 1 cup flour at a time, beating until fairly smooth after each addition. Stir in fruit. Cover and let stand in warm place until doubled (1 to 1 1/2 hours).

Beat batter down; then beat for 4 minutes with a wooden spoon. Turn into buttered 10-inch tube pan; spread evenly. Cover and let stand in warm place until doubled (about 45 min.). Bake in preheated 350 F. oven about 45 minutes. Turn out immediately onto wire rack; cool right side up. Frost with icing. Makes 1 loaf.

Icing

3/4 cup confectioners' sugar
1 Tbsp. milk
1 Tsp. light corn syrup
1 Tsp. butter, softened
1/2 Tsp. vanilla

In a small mixing bowl beat together sugar, milk, corn syrup, butter and vanilla until smooth. Drizzle over top of coffeecake.

This fudge recipe makes 5 pounds but think of the number of gifts it will make.

Fudge

3 pkgs. (6-ozs. each) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 jar (7 1/2 or 8 ozs.) marshmallow cream
2 cups broken pecans
1 Tsp. vanilla extract
5 cups sugar
1 stick butter
1/8 Tsp. salt
1 can (13-ozs.) evaporated milk

Butter a large pan about 12 x 7 1/2 x 2 inches, or two or more smaller pans. Open the chocolate packages, and the jar of marshmallow cream. Have the pecans ready and loosen vanilla cap for ready measuring. These ingredients need to be added the instant the cooked mixture is removed from the heat.

Into a 4-quart saucepan measure sugar, then add butter, salt and evaporated milk. Stirring constantly, cook gently over medium heat to soft ball stage. (It takes about 20 minutes from the time the ingredients are put on to cook).

Remove from heat. Immediately add chocolate, marshmallow cream, pecans and vanilla. Stir quickly and vigorously until chocolate is melted and all ingredients are well blended. When mixture begins to thicken, turn into buttered pan. When cold, cut into squares. Makes about 5 pounds.

***

For something different try these Pomander Balls. They make lovely gifts tucked into the corner of a package and the smell is delightful. They can be hung in a closet or put in a drawer and the fragrance will last for months.

Pomander Balls

Large firm oranges
Whole cloves
Ground cinnamon
Powdered orrisroot (purchase in pharmacy)

Select large firm oranges for making pomanders. Stick whole cloves into the peel of the orange until completely covered with cloves. (The cloves may be inserted into the orange peel more easily if the holes have been made with the tines of a fork).

Roll in a mixture of equal parts of ground cinnamon and orrisroot. Use about 1 1/2 tablespoons of the combined spices for each orange. Pat in as much of the powdered mixture as will adhere to the orange. Wrap the pomander in tissue paper. As pomander dries and shrinks, it develops its spicy fragrance.

Remove from paper, shake off any loose powder and the pomander is ready for use in linen and clothes closets. To hang in closet, tie the pomander with a piece of ribbon ending in a loop.

This Lemon Tea Loaf is nice. Makes a good accompaniment to a cup of tea, or makes luscious toast. Wrap this in plastic wrap and tie with a big red bow.

Lemon Tea Loaf

1 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 Tsp. baking powder
1/4 Tsp. salt
1/3 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 1/2 Tsp. grated lemon rind
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup finely chopped nuts
1/2 cup sugar
2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 Tbsp. water

Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Cream butter. Gradually add 1 cup sugar; cream until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add lemon rind and beat well. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Stir in nuts.

Pour batter into a greased 9 x 5 inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 F. for 50 to 55 minutes, or until cake springs back when lightly pressed with finger.

Cool cake in pan 10 minutes. Meanwhile, combine 1/2 cup sugar, lemon juice, and water in a small saucepan. Place over low heat until mixture just comes to a boil and the sugar is dissolved. Pour hot syrup over hot cake. Let stand 1 minute. Then loosen cake around edges of pan and carefully remove from pan. Finish cooling on rack. When thoroughly cooled, wrap in transparent saran or aluminum foil and store in refrigerator overnight before slicing. (This will freeze well).

Date and Nut Bread makes good toast also, and is especially delicious as a sandwich. You can make the following recipe in 2 loaf pans, or it can be baked in a variety of tin cans for different shapes.

When baking in a soup, juice or coffee can, place a small amount of butter in the bottom of the can and let it melt in the oven before putting in the batter. Fill cans about 2/3 full. (Frozen soup cans make the most interesting looking little loaves to wrap up.)

Date and Nut Bread

1 pkg. (8-ozs.) diced dates
3/4 cup raisins
1 Tsp. baking soda
1 cup boiling water
2 Tbsp. soft butter
1 cup sugar
1 Tsp. vanilla
1 egg
1 - 1/3 cups flour
3/4 cup chopped pecans

Place dates and raisins in covered bowl. Add soda and boiling water. Cover and let stand. Cream butter and sugar. Add vanilla. Add egg and beat well. Add flour, mix until moistened. Pour in fruit mixture, including liquid and pecans, and mix gently to prevent crushing the fruits. Bake in preheated 325 F. oven for 45 minutes, or until cake tests done.

***

Try this served with meat.

Pepper Jelly (Mr. Mullin)

6 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups of cider vinegar
1/2 cup of hot peppers, ground (red and green)
1/2 cup of bell pepper ground (red and green)
6-oz. bottle of Certo

Remove seeds and veins from the peppers. (You must use rubber gloves for this). Mix all ingredients, cook over low heat about 45 minutes. Turn up heat and bring to a boil. Remove from heat immediately.

Let stand about 5 minutes, then add Certo, stir well and put into jars.

Calories count

Holiday plants brighten home

Plants are a lovely addition to the holidays and, cared for properly, can remain enjoyable throughout the year.

The poinsettia is the most common Christmas plant. It needs a bright spot in the room, not in a draft. And it should not be kept where temperatures exceed 72 degrees in the day or 65 degrees at night.

Poinsettias should be watered thoroughly when the soil is dry and water that collects in the receptacle under the pot should be discarded.

A Norfolk Island Pine, dressed in red velvet bows for Christmas, can serve for many years as a living Christmas tree.

To keep your new pine symmetrical, turn the pot frequently to expose different sides to sunlight.

The pine loves sunlight and will grow best with several hours of sunlight a day. But it must not be exposed to the heat of the sun.

In dimmer light, the tree will grow more slowly.

The soil should be kept evenly moist but don't allow the plant to stand in water.

The best temperature is from 65 to 70 degrees during the day.

Another holiday plant is the gloxinia. This plant needs ample indirect light but avoid direct sunlight. Ideal temperatures during flowering is 70 to 75 degrees during the day and 60 degrees at night.

Avoid cold areas, drafts, or direct source of heat such as the top of a television set. Keep soil moist but not waterlogged. Use house plant fertilizer during growth period.

Bright red kalanchoe can be placed anywhere with plenty of light. It prefers 50 to 70 degrees temperature and can't tolerate any direct source of heat such as a TV top.

Water when the soil feels dry but don't let the plant stand in water. Fertilize during the growth and flowering periods.

The ever-popular chrysanthemum needs indirect light for prolonged blooming and can't stand drafts or direct heat. Seventy-five degrees is an ideal day temperature, with cooler nights.

Water when the plant feels dry.

Canyon clubs begin round of holiday parties

Holiday parties for clubwomen of Canyon will fill many afternoons and mornings with merriment as women of the community gather for holiday song-fests, to exchange tokens gifts and to share the spirit of the season.

Beginning the month with a covered dish luncheon for members will be the Canyon chapter of the American Association of University Women. The AAUW luncheon will be held at St. Ann's Catholic Church on Saturday, Dec. 4, beginning at 12:30 p.m. The program will be a holiday musical presentation by Hugh and Rinky Sanders.

Home demonstration clubwomen and members of the HD Council will be holding their annual holiday party on Dec. 6 at the Family Center of the First Baptist Church. Activities will begin at 1 p.m. with the program to include holiday songs by the CHS choirs. The council will be recognizing members with perfect attendance records the past year and installing 1977 officers.

On Dec. 7 holiday parties are being planned for both the Canyon Fine Arts Club and Delta Zeta alumnae. The Fine Arts group will meet at 7:30 p.m. in Room 201 of the Fine Arts Building at West Texas State University while the DZ alumnae will be sharing the holiday spirit with a meeting at the home of Annette Cook, 1210 Creekmore, also beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Woman's Book Club will hear the "Christmas Story," exchange gifts and sing holiday carols on Dec. 8. The club's meeting will be at the home of Mrs. I. F. SoRelle, 2416 8th Avenue, beginning at 3 p.m.

The traditional holiday party for University Study Club is planned for Dec. 10 to begin at 1:15 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church. The group will be entertained with a performance by the sixth grade choir under the direction of Donna Wilson.

Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapters will be holding their holiday observances and programs during December and many will be entertaining their husbands and children at various parties during the month.

Holiday meetings are also planned by the Heritage Woman's Club and Canyon Study Club on Dec. 13. The HWC members will be meeting at the home of Debbie Conner, #18 Greenwood, for a meal of international foods in keeping with the month's study of International Affairs.

Canyon Study Club members will gather at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 13 in the home of Elaine Peeples, 706 Foster Lane, for a holiday desert party. The club will also hold initiation for new members and have a special display of holiday decorations provided by HR's Flowers and Gifts.

Esther McCrory chapter members of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be holding their annual Christmas tea between 3-5 p.m. Dec. 13 at the First Christian Church in Amarillo.

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum Auxiliary will be holding a holiday social event for volunteer members of the organization on Dec. 14. The coffee is planned to be held in the home of the president, Betty Morrison, at 1307 9th Avenue.

A holiday party for the members of Alpha Delta Pi Alumnae is planned for Dec. 15 beginning at 7 p.m. in the Lake Tanglewood home of Natalie Russell.

Sue Hite Club will be holding their holiday program on Dec. 16 beginning at 3:45 p.m. at the home of Mae Coffee, 2407 8th Avenue. The members will be bringing gifts to send to the girls at Girlstown.

Holiday party and gift exchange for the Canyon and Hereford members of the Tierra Blanca chapter of the National Secretaries Association is also planned for Dec. 16.

A dutch treat luncheon is planned by the Canyon Dames social organization to be held at the Railroad Crossing Restaurant on Dec. 16.

Among other clubs planning holiday parties will be the Canyon Garden Club which is to meet Dec. 21 at the home of Flossie Johnston, 2402 11th Avenue.

Librarian recommends books as Xmas gifts

Books are always a welcome present under the Christmas tree.

Both new books and old favorites are available, but what to buy?

Mary Huntington, city librarian, helps out with suggestions for all ages.

For the very young, she recommends any of the Dr. Seuss books, lively fantasy that tickles the imagination.

Babar and Father Christmas by Jean de Brunhoff is a seasonal suggestion, she says, but there are many Babar books that are always popular with youngsters.

Another series is Dorrie by Patricia Coombs that contains books for the very young and more complex ones for youngsters up to fourth grade.

Older youngsters enjoy the Little House books by Laura Ingalls Wilder and the fantasies by C. S. Lewis. A new title in the Lewis series is The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, Mrs. Huntington said.

The Pippi series is still popular as is E. B. White's gentle tales of Charlotte's Web.

Some new titles include The Pink Dress, by Anne Alexander, a teen-aged romance; The Turning Place, science fiction by Jean Karl; The Lottery Rose by Irene Hunt and The King's Falcon by Paula Fox.

For adults, Mrs. Huntington suggests a new novel by Frederick Forsyth, called The Shepherd or one by Taylor Caldwell called Ceremony of the Innocent.

Non-fiction gifts include a biography of Adolf Hitler by John Toland or Blind Ambition: The White House Years by John Dean.

A book for backpacking and camping buffs is Living Off the Land by Bradford Angier.

Panhandle Pilgrimage is recommended for history lovers and Tender Tyrant, is recommended for football fans.

Santa wants letters

Santa Claus informed the Canyon News early this week that he is getting ready to start packing down his sleigh for the trip to the Texas Panhandle.

And since he can't be expected to out-guess each and every youngster in Canyon, he urged that they all get their letters in the mail early so he'll know what gift to leave for each child Christmas Eve.

Letters to Santa Claus may be addressed to Box 779, Canyon, Texas 79015, and will be forwarded to Santa for timely delivery. Letters will also be published in the Christmas edition of The Canyon News.

The portable heart defibrillator at Palo Duro Hospital is the objective for funds being raised by Heritage Woman's Club on a holiday greeting project in the city. Shown with the defibrillator and greeting are Ray Grimes, hospital administrator, Helen Hays, nurse, and HWC members, Gwen Cornett and Janie Loudder, president.

HWC sponsors "greetings" as project

Christmas greetings for the neighbors in your community will be available through a small listing fee if the Heritage Woman's Club's project meets with success. The club is seeking families who wish to extend holiday greetings to local friends and have arranged for greeting space in the Canyon News. Listings of family names are being sought with a fee of $5 going to the club for their support of the portable heart defibrillator at Palo Duro Hospital. Listings in the community greeting will be saving residents the cost of holiday cards and postage. Families desiring to be listed in the community greeting may contact Marion Marrs, 355-3748, or other members of the club.

Carols say tradition

Carols and candles bring added spirit and luster to Christmas. The word "carol" comes from the middle English carolen, meaning "to sing joyously." The majority of our most familiar carols date from the nineteenth century. Some researchers believe that carol singing could be a carryover from the Roman songs of the Saturnalia. Francis Scott Key, noted lawyer and author of The Star Spangled Banner, also wrote carols. It is little known that the comedian Harpo Marx, of the famous Marx Brothers, also authored a popular Christmas carol. Caroling on Christmas Eve is a tradition brought to America by our English forbears, that delights us all at holiday time. Candles — Special lighting effects as we now know them, elaborate and colorful at Christmas, started with the romantic glow of holiday candles. Placing lighted candles in the window on Christmas eve is believed to have started in Boston.

Homey accessories are charming

The use of fresh, growing plants around the house for color and decoration has increased in almost staggering numbers . . . and there's really nothing lovelier to make a house look lived in. Combined with dried natural flowers and fruits they are perfect for the holidays. Here are a few ideas you may not have thought of, including some using traditional evergreens and mistletoe in not so traditional ways. With a little imagination, there's no end to the unusual Christmas decorations you can put together at home. If you are lucky enough to have a bay or wide window, try massing pots of flowering plants together — poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamen — on a window seat or small table, covered with a pretty cloth. Decorate the pots with Christmas cutouts from your favorite magazine or with holiday decals. Polish your best silver bowl and fill it with dried Lunaria (Honesty is its more commonly known name) and fresh holly. The silver-white translucent Lu-naria is a perfect foil for the vivid red holly berries. Your beach basket, lying idle in the pantry, makes a charming rustic holder turned on its side and filled with green apples and shiny red Christmas balls. Sprigs of evergreens in and around the apples add extra color. Grandma's old butter churn will be rejuvenated, filled with bittersweet, cattails and evergreen. Make a hanging mistletoe ball for a doorway by sticking sprigs of mistletoe into a round potato, in which you have pierced holes with a nail. Add a perky bow at the top and hang. The moisture in the potato will keep the mistletoe fresh! For a unique surprise centerpiece, insert small cuts of evergreen into a long loaf of bread, covering it completely. Choose your loaf to suit your table shape and length. As with the mistletoe ball, the greens stay fresh longer because of the moisture in the bread.
